A long arm reached over Sally Anne's houlder, a bill was thrust through the opening. A deep voice said "Two," A hand grasped her elbow lightly and the same voice remarked pleasantly, "I'm so glad you came. Hurry and we can make this Sally Anne loved to dance-

So could her partner, as she soon discovered. He was taller, much but in the creeping mist which sifted in at doorways and windows and which the half hundred couples circled weirdly, it was difficult to get a clear impression of his features. That the tall man was a courteous gentleman was self-evident the floor and the music were good. Aside from a few twenks of conscience just at first, Sally Anne thoroughly enjoyed the evening. much, sat out and talked some. The strange man, without giving a ghost of a hint as to his identity, mentioned his services oversens. told some amusing experiences. incidentally referring to his top ser geant and often to his first lieuren out, but never calling them by name

A couple nearby spoke of the hour which was late. Hurriedly Sally Anne started up, saying she must go at once. Suddenly a full realization of what she had done came to her. Her escort walked silently down the steps beside her. At the bottom Saily Anne suggested nervously that he leave her there; the could get home safely. The tall man whietled sharply; a coupe-let appeared out of the mist, "Take the lady to the address she gives you Henry," he ordered. Then he assist ed Sally into the car, thanked her for a very pleasant evening, lifted his hat and closed the door. The next morning dawned bright and sanny. To Sally Anne the fog and her dereliction of the night before seemed a dream. She preferred to think of them as such. But she couldn't help pondering a fittle as to who the tall man might be. He had not appeared to be any more familiar with the place than herself. Jerry's cheerful signal whistle from down the street interrupted these thoughts before Sally had decided just how and when to "fess up" to escapade. Of course she would do it sooper or later; she had never kept anything from Jerry yet, and she wasn't going to begin now.

Almost before the first bug and kiss vere ever Jerry sprung the news His beloved captain was spending the summer nearby. It seemed they had just met at the station, "Blake's wife isn't here yet," Jerry explained; "she high-links-thought she was going to have a fine clance to show him off. Blake hates that sort of thing, so be skipped. They had some sort of tiff, I imagine. Guess that, or the fog or something got the old bey's goat, because he told me about going up to that big public dance hall last night. Picked up some fulr mystery and danced with her all evening-said she wore a wedding ring and didn't act as though she were used to being out alone. That sort of thing isn't in Blake's tine usually."

Sally Anne thanked her lucky stars that Jerry couldn't see her face. She didn't reply. "How would you like it if I did a thing like that?" Jerry

"How would you like it if I did?"

counter-questioned Sally. "That's a proposition I refuse to consider because it's inconceivable," replied Jerry in a voice he selde "By the way, dear, I asked Captain Blake to lunch tomorrow-is it all right?"

"Is he a tall, dark man with a deep voice, Jerry?" Sally Anne's head was pressed close to her husband's coat

"Why, yes." answered Jerry puzzled. "Then I think, Jerry, it's up to you to decide whether you want him or "I don't quite get you, Sally." Jerry tried to lift the little head from his shoulder but didn't succeed.

want you to like my captain; he's a mighty fine man." "I do," buff laughed, bulf cried Sal-"Oh. Jerry, you haven't an idea how lonesome I was here without yon-in that awful fog. And then when you didn't come last night I thought you didn't care, and it memed as though I should go mad without some one to talk to. And, Jerry, he talked a lot about his first Hent nant and that's you though, though I didn't suspect it at the time; so It wasn't so horribly, awfully, impossibly, unpardonably wicked, was it? And he danced wonderfully, Jerryand I love it so- and you never take

"Sally! Are you trying to tell me that you were Islake's fair unknown?" "Yes," replied Sally Anne, bravely. "Can you forgive me, Jerry-this first and last time?" "There's no room in my heart for blame, dear; it's too full of thankfulness that it was Blake's hands you fell into. If some bounder bad insulted you! But it would have been my ing, slone and unchaperoned, a publication fault for bringing you here and then leaving you as I did. Guess I sort of forgot you weren't a soldier. Guess

I need some reconstructing, dear, as husband." "But how about having Captain Blake here, Jerry?" "Sure we'll have him. Blake's a nan-a big man. His kind would u on the fog." Planta Have Eyes. Most people are aware that potatoes have eyes, but how many know that certain common garden and wild flowers are similarly equipped? The nasturtium, begonia, clover, woodsorrel and bluebell, among others, have eyes placed on their leaves. They are they protuberances, filled with a transparent, gummy mixture, which focuses the rays of light upon a sensitive patch of tissue behind them.

A pusturtium plant has thousands of such "eyes" on its leaves, but it is not yet known if the plant can actually see. Are the sense impressions telegraphed to some central nerve corresponding with the brain of the animal kingdom? In addition to this visual organ. many plants show a sensitiveness that points to further resemblance to animals; while certain seaweeds and mosses in an early stage of their existence are able actually to swim through the water.

A Spinning Top. A spinning top is kept from falling because of the speed with which it revolves. The attraction of gravitation is temperarily overcome by the centrifugat force produced by the rotation of the top when it is spun. Each part of the top is suffect to the ame centrifugal force as each other part at the same distance from the axis of rotation and to no greater force, so that there is no cause for the top being pulled in any particufar direction by the force of gravity As soon as the centrifugal force begins to lessen because of lessening speed of rotation the attraction of gravity begins to be exerted again and the tep begins to wabble. When the spinning motion diminishes to such an extent that the attraction of gravity omes greater than the centrifugal ce the top falls to one side.
